

On June 3, 2002 the International Peace Garden received ten, 10 from the Trade Center wreckage. The girders lie at rest at the 911 Memorial Site at the International Peace Garden everlasting reminders of the human tragedy that occurred one quiet September morning in New York City, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D.C.

A 9/11 memorial competition was held, open to students registered at a recognized educational institution in either Manitoba or North Dakota. The competition was organized by Professor Charlie Thomsen, the Associate Dean of Faculty of Architecture at The University of Manitoba, in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The object of the competition was to develop a permanent memorial to those individuals who lost their lives in event of September 11, 2001, incorporating the steel girders. There were 19 entries; the first place winner went to Derrick Wolbaum, Marcus Lund, and Tim Kennedy, 4th year Landscape Architecture Students from North Dakota University in Fargo, ND.

On November 26, 2002, their design, with the message of recall, reflect, remember, understand, forgive, and grow selected as the first place winner. The winning presentation is displayed at the International Peace Garden Center. The design is composed of three separate, yet interdependent chambers titled Recall, Reflect, and Remember. It unknown, and if the First Place Winning Design will be built at the Peace Garden. Funding will have to be in place. estimated cost of the project is $150,000. Memorial Gift Forms are available for your convenience or you may make other donations, as well. Contact the office toll free: 1-888-432-6733

RECALL: allows visitors to recall their emotional responses to the tragedy. Six girders extend from the ground and as a gateway into the memorial.

REFLECT: identifies the importance of self-reflection in coming to terms with the tragedy. Here a single beam filled with water lies on the ground, where visitors can make a person connection with the tragedy by touching both the and the soothing water that lies within.

REMEMBER: allow visitors to remember those individuals lost in the tragedy. A bronze plaque will stand in remembrance of those who perished in the attack, while a native oak tree stands as a living memorial and a reminder the power of life and the benefits of growth through tragedy. Those who lost their lives will not be forgotten.